Reference is made to the following documents:

D1: US-A-5 733 081;

D2: EP-A-0 999 188.

Document D2, which is considered to be the most relevant prior art, discloses an ultrasonic cutting method, from which the subject matter of claim 1 differs in that the properties and parameters have been selected in such a way that only the body of the functional film is cut while the underlying substrate is left intact.

It follows that the subject matter of claim 1 is novel (PCT Article 33(2)).

The problem that the present invention is intended to solve can therefore be considered to be that of cutting a functional film deposited on a hard substrate without damaging said substrate.

The solution to this problem, as proposed in claim 1 of the present application, is considered to involve an inventive step (PCT Article 33(3)), for the following reasons:

In light of the available prior art documents, a person skilled in the art would have no reason to select the properties and parameters in such a way that only the body of the functional film is cut while the underlying substrate is left intact. D2 proposes cutting the film using ultrasounds but the glass panel is also scratched. D1 discloses an ultrasonic cutting device capable of cutting the film only. Said document does not, however, suggest the use of the device with functional films deposited on a hard substrate, but relates to the problem of cutting cardboard.

Claims 2-16 are dependent on claim 1 and, as such, therefore also fulfil the PCT requirements of novelty and inventive step.

Claim 17 is likewise considered to be novel and to involve an inventive step because none of the documents discloses such a method.

No substrate as per claim 18 is known from the available prior art.

Equipment claim 19 merely explains the way in which the equipment is used and, as a result, does not define said device clearly in terms of the technical features of an apparatus.

Moreover, claim 1 is a method claim. It follows that the reference to claim 1 serves to specify the way in which the equipment is used but still does not define the equipment in terms of the technical features of an apparatus.

It follows that the restrictions intended by the features in claim 19 are not clear from said claim, contrary to the requirement of PCT Article 6.

What is more, document D1 describes equipment suitable for implementing a cutting method as per claim 1.

It follows that the present application does not fulfil the requirements set forth in PCT Article 33(1) because the subject matter of claim 19 does not comply with the requirement of novelty defined in PCT Article 33(2).
